How to measure yourself

Four diagrams illustrating how to measure different body parts:

- Height: A person standing with arms at their sides. A vertical line with arrows at both ends indicates the measurement from the top of the head to the bottom of the feet.
- Bust: A person wearing a white t-shirt. A horizontal line with arrows at both ends indicates the measurement around the fullest part of the chest, under the arms.
- Waist: A person wearing a white t-shirt and dark pants. A horizontal line with arrows at both ends indicates the measurement around the narrowest part of the waist.
- Hip: A person wearing a white t-shirt and dark pants. A horizontal line with arrows at both ends indicates the measurement around the widest part of the hips.
